

Advanced Communications & Media provides a wide range of research and consulting services to support our clients with up-to-date information on specific segments, regions and operators.

We supply detailed profiles and develop projections on individual geographical markets and license areas (including non-public information on key service providers).

AC&M also carries out tailor-made research projects addressing the clients' specific needs and requirements. This includes &quot;zooming in&quot; on specific products and services, evaluation of market potential, price elasticity studies, entry strategies, distribution channels, and more.

Our scope of competence extends far beyond Russian market - we closely monitor wireline and wireless markets in CIS and Baltics. AC&M also offers ad-hoc services such as assistance in license filings, getting regulatory approvals, developing business plans, and other services.