

According to AC&M estimates, Russian broadband market passed over 10 million threshold by the end of September 2009.

There were 10.2 mn broadband accounts which translates into 19.5 connections per 100 households. Moscow is by far the largest market with 2.8 mn accounts and penetration around 64% while average penetration in Russian regions (outside Moscow and St.Petersburg) is evaluated at 14 per 100 households.

The detailed information on Russian residential broadband is available in Data Downloads section of our web site.